

Factsheet, FI Global Macro Equities ETF Portfolio

30 September 2023

Objective

We have constructed a global equity portfolio using a macro, top-down investment style. To capture a better risk-return profile, we have chosen market segments that may vary from consensus views, and we achieve this with a selection of low-cost Exchange Traded Funds (ETFs). The investment objective is to track the growth of global equity markets over a longer-term basis to offer a balanced exposure to global equity performance.

Equity allocation and investment decisions are made by the investment committee led by Paul Sedgwick using the firm's macro analysis. The portfolio will be consistently invested in a mix of equity market segments. Individual ETF selection to implement the equity strategy will focus on developed economies with a small exposure to emerging markets. The funds are selected for low cost and high liquidity to allow investors to access their capital at any time should they wish to. Investors' assets are held in their own name in managed accounts with our custodian.

Market View

The rally towards the end of August that led to some optimism coming into the last month of the quarter was quickly extinguished as equities and bond markets sold off. The Dow Jones index now flat on the year and the S&P 500 giving back 10% of its gains on the year. Much of the rally in stocks this year has been as a result of margin expansion not earnings growth, and for much of the year the equity market largely ignored the rise in yields, rather focussing on the underlying strength of the US economy. September saw a sharp sell-off in the longer end of the curve, and this in turn put further pressure on equity valuations. Inflationary pressures appear to continue to ease around the globe, however central bankers, whilst signalling we may be close to the interest rate cycle peak remain firmly of the view that they have no intention of cutting rates at least until the second half of 2024. We are coming into the second quarter's earnings season and that will influence stocks into the final three months of the year. The underlying strength of the US economy has led to analysts starting to revise upwards earnings expectations, as the bar has been set quite low for this quarter. A reasonable earnings season, along with the correction in stocks could support the Yule tide rally.
